Q1. Read the passage given below and answer the following questions:

(1x10=10)

On the edge of a busy town lay a small patch of forest. People hardly noticed it, as they were always rushing to offices, schools, and markets. But inside, the forest was alive with wonders. Birds chirped in hidden nests, squirrels darted from branch to branch, and the tall bamboo swayed gently like dancers in the wind.

One day, a group of children from the town wandered into the forest. At first, they felt disappointed—there were no swings, no shops, no games. But soon they began to notice little things: a butterfly with wings brighter than a rainbow, mushrooms shaped like umbrellas, and sunlight breaking through the leaves in golden beams. They felt as if the forest had been waiting to show them its secrets.

When the children returned home, they carried no toys or sweets, yet they were happier than ever. They realized that joy need not always be bought; sometimes it is hidden in nature, free for those who pause and look.

Long ago in a quiet village, there lived two sisters—Meera and Tara. Meera was known for her kindness, while Tara was admired for her clever tongue. One day, an old woman came begging for food. Meera quickly shared her last roti, though she herself was hungry. The woman blessed her, saying, "From now on, every word you speak shall turn into a flower or a pearl."

When Meera returned home, her words dropped pearls on the floor, amazing everyone. Tara, jealous of her sister's fortune, decided to try her luck. She gave the old woman stale crumbs but smiled sweetly, expecting a blessing. The woman frowned and said, "From now on, every word you speak shall turn into frogs and snakes."
